

October 12, 2009

DEMOCRATIC NOMINEE FOR DISTRICT ATTORNEY
SETH WILLIAMS GOES `GREEN'

Philadelphia---As a life long Eagles fan it was a pleasure for Seth Williams to take some time out of his busy campaigning schedule, put on his Randall Cunningham jersey and help cheer the Eagles onto victory. Mr. Williams joined more than 50,000 other Eagles fans at Lincoln Financial Field yesterday, where he grilled hamburgers and hot dogs, and of course sang the “fly Eagles fly” song.

While celebrating the Eagles and Donovan McNabb’s triumphant return to the field were the first priority of the day, it was also a chance for Seth to meet with voters. As momentum builds in these last few weeks leading up to Election Day, Seth continues to rally support for his candidacy as Philadelphia's new District Attorney.

Alongside his family, friends and fellow Eagles fans, the Democratic Nominee for District Attorney talked about his ultimate goal in the city---putting an end to gun violence and making this of a safer city to work, live and raise a family.

Fighting against what he calls his biggest hurdle – apathy – Seth reminded all voters in the city that Election Day is Tuesday, Nov. 3. It’s an historic day when Philadelphians will vote to turn the page on a new day, with a new D.A. for Philadelphia.

Seth wants to thank all of his family, friends, supporters and die hard Eagles fans who extended their best wishes and warm regards.